

Undergraduates wanted!

Students paid to study ($24,526 - $32,833 p.a. + benefits)

The Australian Defence Force (ADF) pays suitable undergraduate students who would like careers as Officers in the Royal Australian Navy, Australian Army or Royal Australian Air Force up to $32,833 to study at their own University.

Officer careers in the ADF provide well-remunerated, exciting and professionally rewarding chances for graduates to practice their skills on the most sophisticated equipment found anywhere; at the same time leading and managing highly professional staff in some amazing situations. The experience you gain will be second to none.

Under this generous scheme, full-time Bachelor students can be sponsored through their degrees before embarking on a challenging and rewarding career as an officer in the ADF. You will have a guaranteed job post graduation with a starting salary of $53K (plus annual increments).

The ADF also pays other costs and benefits for its undergraduates including:

HECS fees (or equivalent payment for full-fee paying students);

Student union fees;

Prescribed textbook costs;

A generous rental allowance;

Full comprehensive medical and dental treatment; and

Excellent superannuation (18% employer contribution rising to 23% and 28% as length of service increases).

There are no major military commitments for our undergraduates during their sponsorship and they remain at their current University throughout their studies.

Interested students are encouraged to apply for sponsorship now by calling 13 19 01. Further details of ADF officer jobs and undergraduate sponsorship opportunities are available on the defencejobs website at:
